In January 2011, Sark Island in the English Channel was named the world's first dark sky island by the International Dark-Sky Association (IDA). The IDA recognizes places where the nighttime environment is protected from light pollution. In those places, the stars can be seen easily.

Sark is a very small island, and only a few people live there. However, it is Europe's first inhabited place to receive the International Dark Sky Community award. Sark has no street lights and no cars. Also, the people who live there keep indoor light from shining outside. Therefore, the night sky is dark, and people who like looking at stars can enjoy the night sky there. Officials hope that more visitors will come to Sark as a result of the award.

There are several dark sky places around the world. Most of them are parks where no people live. The only other dark sky community is Flagstaff, a city in Arizona, USA. Over 60,000 people live there, and it has a large observatory. It became the world's first dark sky community in 2001.

第二段的一、二句 Sark is a very small island, and only a few people live there. However, it is Europe's first inhabited place to receive the International Dark Sky Community award. 和最後一句 Officials hope that more visitors will
