Welcome to our gallery, I am Matthew Morgan. Today we have for you a very special exhibition of Picasso's works from his Blue, Rose and African periods. Picasso's Blue Period began in 1901, when he started to paint in blue and dark colors after his close friend committed suicide. Illness and death became the dominant theme of his works at this time. In 1904, Picasso moved to Paris and fell in love with a model. The relationship helped Picasso overcome his depression and enter his Rose Period, when he used cheerful red, orange and pink colors to depict actors or circus performers. After the Rose Period was the African Period, which started in 1906 and lasted until 1909. During this period, Picasso found inspiration in the African tribal sculptures and masks. The subject of his paintings shifted to the female body and his own self-portrait. Now you are looking at Picasso's Old Guitarist from his Blue Period. It's a painting of an old blind man who is playing guitar in the street. With the worn clothing and skeleton-like body, the man looks miserable and appears to be close to death. He weakly leans over his guitar, as if trying to find comfort in his music. Such struggling is typical of Picasso's Blue Period paintings. To our right, we've got another famous painting...
